

Melissa Ramsay unveils floaty new soundtrack for iso, 'Free'

Following the release of 'Alone' with Copenhagen-based artist Naes London amassing 100k Spotify streams, Melbourne's alt pop singer/songwriter Melissa Ramsay returns with the ethereal, airy and hopeful 'Free', produced and mixed by Hayden Francis (Woodes, Wolfjay), out September 25th.

Telling the story of anxiety, loneliness and hope for the future, 'Free' details feelings that Ramsay believes many can relate to globally. Showcasing Ramsay's warm and delicate vocals and complimented by Francis' celestial soundscape, 'Free' gently builds with the pervasive soft piano, recorded in a rural Victorian church, and slowly adds layers of glimmering synths and acoustic guitars over a relaxed beat. 'Free' is a floaty, light and luminous indie-pop offering from Ramsay. The song will be represented in an upcoming music video with a Spring/Summer theme that Ramsay single-handedly filmed and edited.

'Free' comes after Ramsay's 2020 releases of 'Promises' and the aforementioned 'Alone' with Naes London and past collaborations with ARIA Award winning Feenixpawl and Just a Gent on his track 'Loaded' that she performed live at Splendour in the Grass Festival.

Ramsay on 'Free':

"I wrote this a long time before COVID-19 but decided to release it now because I think a lot of people will be able to relate to the feelings of anxiety. It talks about feeling cooped, which many people have experienced while staying home to keep themselves and others safe. There's also a sense of hope in the song. I wanted to release something brighter to feel like a warm sunny day for people to listen to and escape to."
